Nebraska Zeta at Kearney is planning to give some demonstration debates on the high school question. One will be given before one of the Nebraska State Teachers conventions.—The Antelope.

The Western Association of the Teachers of Speech will hold its convention at Salt Lake City during the Thanksgiving recess. Prof. E. R. Nichols, California Alpha, is president.

Former National President Pflaum plans to take a debate squad to the Southwestern tournament at Winfield, Kansas, December 7-8.—The Bulletin.

Something New In Debate

J. THOMPSON BAKER,

Kansas Delta, Southwestern College

Twelve years ago this fall was held the first debate tournament ever held in the United States. It was held at Southwestern College, Winfield, Kansas, and six colleges participated in that tournament. It is a long ways from that tournament to that of a year ago held here, when fifty-three colleges from seven states had 542 debates, in the two days of the tournament.

Noting the rapidity of the growth of the debate tournament and how it has practically displaced the old methods of debating in high schools and colleges, many have asked whether it will last, and whether it is the last thing in debating. Is there anything new in sight?

A year ago the writer was called to a junior college, at Altus, Oklahoma, to assist in holding a debate institute. This has proved to be rather an innovation and very valuable to high school and junior college debaters. It is something new, and may be of interest to FORENSIC folks.

This was not a tournament but an institute to give information and training in practical debate methods and work. Following registration and preliminary announcements, the first thing on the program was an address by an expert, on "Constructive Argument." This address gave just what is most needed by young debaters in preparing their constructive speeches. Then six young debaters gave constructive argument pro and con on the current high school question for debate. These had been carefully prepared and were exhibits of the previous address. A round table discussion of these construction speeches followed. This brought us to the noon hour, and here a coaches' luncheon was attended by the thirty or more coaches present. This luncheon was provided by the school holding the institute and all coaches were invited guests.

The afternoon began with an address on "Winning the Audience." Opportunity was given, following this, for questions and answers. In fact this feature prevailed thruout the institute.

"A Girl on the Inside Looking Out" was next on the program, and proved a most entertaining and instructive talk by one of the national high school debate champions.

Next, the two most outstanding high school teams of the state (as revealed by the last state tournaments) put on a red hot debate on the question debated this year. Following this two outstanding debate coaches criticised the debate, one criticising the affirmative, the other the negative; and in turn they invited questions and gave answers.

In the afternoon following this there was a vacant period when several schools present put on practice debates.

In the evening there was a fine social hour for all attending the institute, and this showed over 300 high school and junior college people present. Following this social hour, an address was given on "Development and Values of the Debate Tournament." Then came a debate on the question of the year between the national champion high school team and the best local team. This debate was critically reviewed and criticised by an expert critic judge of national standing.

The next morning the institute opened with an address on "How to Develop and Run a Tournament," followed by another address on "Tournaments for Colleges and High Schools."

Then a model debate was staged by two junior college teams on the current college debate question, followed by a general discussion and questions on the model debate.

"Practical Pointers in Coaching" was discussed at length by the coach of the national champion high school team. A coaches' meeting followed this, and then came adjournment.

It seems this institute idea originated with Miss Emily Smith, the very capable debate coach of the Altus Junior College, and her moving spirit has had much to do with the success of the institute. It has been held two years in Altus, Okla. So successful was it the first year that last year the 300 debate people from Oklahoma and northern Texas who attended were unanimous in asking that it be made an annual affair. Of course the program will be varied from year to year.

The writer, who has had extensive experience in debate tournaments, was privileged to participate in this institute last year, and has been asked to conduct similar institutes in other states the present year, and also to return to Altus in the institute this year. The institute appeals to high school and junior college people as just the kind of a meeting needed as a pre-season training clinic for debaters.

Originally it was planned to have the institute the first day primarily for high schools and the second for junior college folks. But last year the junior colleges were practically all there the first day. And then next morning when the session was opened in a smaller room, we had to adjourn to the main auditorium, for it was found that almost all had stayed for the second day's work.

In such an institute there is practically no expense save the transportation of debaters. The writer has been asked to conduct a similar institute this fall for junior colleges and high schools at one of our fine junior colleges in Kansas; and all the schools interested seem enthusiastic in their support of it.

The nineteenth annual convention of the National Association of Teachers of Speech will be held at the Roosevelt Hotel, New Orleans, December 27-29, 1934. The program will be divided into four main sections: Dramatics and Interpretation, Original Speaking, Speech Science, and the Psychology and Pedagogy of Speech. Thus, it will be possible for those of you who are interested in original speaking, for instance, to attend a series of meetings devoted to the teaching of public speaking, methods of argumentation, the history of American oratory, trends in inter-collegiate debating, etc., or, if you prefer, you may spend part of your time at meetings of the other groups.

Leaders in the profession from colleges and universities in all parts of the country will be present. Officers of the forensic societies will hold a conference on the educational values of debating and oratory. There will be tours through the historic French Quarter, an opportunity to visit Le Petit Theatre du Vieux Carre, and a dinner at one of the famous French restaurants.

You are invited to join with us in this three-day program. When you make your hotel reservation be sure to mention that you are attending the convention.

H. L. EWBANK,
President, National Association
Teachers of Speech.

The Central States Speech Association meeting will be held next year at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin, on April 12 and 13. The Central States Speech Association is affiliated with the National Association of Teachers of Speech and its membership is made up of teachers of speech in the central states. It is urged that a large number of teachers in colleges, universities, and high schools avail themselves of this meeting and be there in attendance.

Sincerely,
GEO. R. R. PFLAUM.

EDITOR'S PERSONAL PAGE

Where inconsistencies cease from troubling and logic is at rest

The Editor of the FORENSIC hopes that some of the chapters which have received little notice in the official magazine of the society will object strenuously. Some chapters have received more than their share, while others have had no mention made of their activities. This is certainly not being fair to the chapters and no editor can defend such a policy of favoritism.

The chapters which have more than their share of space have made news of their activities available for the editor, sometimes through personal letters, often by arranging for him to receive the college paper regularly. The neglected chapters will receive attention if they will make news of the forensic activities available to the editor.

AN ITEM ABOUT EACH CHAPTER IN EACH ISSUE OF THE FORENSIC is the ideal of the editor. Don't forget to supply him with the news. You owe it to your own chapter and to the other chapters of the society. Student readers have indicated that they read the items of chapter news ahead of anything else in the magazine.

Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
When honor's at the stake.

Hamlet, IV, iv, 53-6.

If you want to see how much forensics have changed in twenty-five hundred years, compare the debates in volume V of the Pi Kappa Delta debate series with one of the oldest recorded arguments, that in the book of Job. That is where the three-man debate team originated.
