

jungle, P.K.D. has found the secret that unlocks the

Think with me for a moment on the activities of this fraternity; during the past half century it has stimulated thousands of speakers to attack significant social, economic and political problems. Support for farm prices, membership in a world court and an association of nations, minimum wages and maximum hour laws, increase in the powers of the President, the use of an International police force—these are all examples of issues originally debated by Pi Kappa Delta and later resolved in the affirmative. It is entirely possible that the consideration given by the top strata of the nation's college and university students did have a real affect on the climate of public opinion which made possible the adaption of these proposals.

If this conclusion is too far fetched for you, then let me offer that there has been more real learning on the debate platform than in the classroom. Many a dry as dust Econ course has been given substance by the vigor of the forensic program. International Relations lectures have come alive in the heat of intercollegiate competition. Sociology and political science have become meaningful as students were motivated to learn by being involved in significant issues.

To arrive at a different set of values which will enable us to cope with materialism, statism, conformity and fear demands at least a restudy of the social sciences. In the words of Robert M. Hutchins—

Think of the plight of the economists, whose whole "science" is based on the idea of scarcity. What can they do with a country whose problem is abundance? Think of the political scientists, who have taught us that the issue in politics is who gets what and how, and who now do not know how to defend democracy when it appears that perhaps other systems may get more cheaper and faster. Think of the scholars in jurisprudence, who have insisted for a hundred years that the law was the command of the sovereign and who do not know what to do with a world in which sovereignty is fading and the cry is for justice.

What we have to have is a tremendous increase in the intellectual power of the nation. This is why we have to see to it that everybody is educated to the limit of his capacity and that he continues his education throughout his life. This is why we have to re-examine the content of education to make sure that it increases the intellectual power of the nation instead of being a harmless occupation designed to while away the time of the young until we are ready to have them go to work. And this is one reason why we have to remain alert to the latent McCarthyism that is always lurking below the surface in this country.

If we would step up the tempo of the learning process, we would do well to encourage the classroom use of the techniques of involvement which have been standard practice in Pi Kappa Delta for years.

My second suggestion is made direct to Pi Kappa Delta and to the framers of the questions which you debate. Pi Kap has demonstrated that it can make a significant contribution to the understanding and eventual solution of serious contemporary problems. I am suggesting that we now give some attention to the four great issues—materialism, statism, conformity and fear. To do so would mean a departure from the traditional framing of the resolution as a proposition of policy—you will recall from your argumentation theory that there also may be propositions of fact and of theory or value. A direct attack could be made on the issues we have been discussing by debating such propositions as:

Resolved: That the activities of the House Un-American Activities Committee are detrimental to American democracy.

Resolved: That Bishop Pike is a heretic.

Resolved: That the Social Security system has weakened America's moral fiber.

or even

Resolved: That we have nothing to fear but fear itself.

This might even revive audience interest in forensics—I think we could pack the house for a debate between the University of the Pacific and West Point on the proposition: Resolved: that Operation Abolition should receive an Oscar as the best picture of the year!

College students have been called the Silent Generation, the most conservative of the conservatives. A generation that considers a dormitory panty raid a radical form of behavior. I believe that there is an increasing number of college men and women who are anxious to attack some of our deep and underlying problems. On the average campus they get little or no encouragement to do this, and certainly little opportunity through normal curricular channels.

Why not bring controversy back to the center of the University and encourage it through the use of techniques which this week bring nearly 700 speakers to Stillwater.

I know that I have laid myself wide open to the negative refutation that the solution I have presented does not begin to match in scope the magnitude of the problem we have been considering. I always did like to have the last word and I would admit that this is true, but note that other than by revolution the greater the problem the less monumental are the solutions likely to be. There is no single solution to the manifold problems our culture faces—but there is something we can do—and Pi Kappa Delta has the secret to help get us out of the mess we're in.

On the cover of this issue, Dr. Harvey Cromwell, retiring President, hands the symbol of forensic authority to newly-elected President Raymond Yeager, while re-elected Vice-President Roy Murphy looks on. According to the Constitution of Phi Kappa Delta, Yeager and Murphy take office officially on August 1, 1961.

Credit for the photo should be given to Osborns Studio, the official photographers for the Convention. THE FORENSIC wishes to extend its thanks to Professor Robert B. Capel, who supplied some of the snapshots used in this issue. For others of the more candid exposures the editor himself will have to take full blame.
