Students are halting, drawn hither but unwilling to enter upon the work of Advanced classes unless they are to have the instruction and influence of several professors. Right or wrong the student's judgment decides the case.
A College must have multiplicity in its faculty. But they are right.
Their demand is based on true conceptions of human nature.

No one man is so symmetrically in Character and in Culture as to induce in those under his influence a well rounded manhood, unbiased judgment, liberal sympathies, many sided activity, many is an improvement on one though none of the many be the equal in all respects of the one. Facilities, too, are requisite to any permanent growth.
Notably facilities for cheap living, other things being equal the Student goes where he gets most at least expense, and we may not dispute his right and wisdom in so doing.
Our idle basement if not our idle attic also should be utilized, to crowd the Class room when we build our College. I beg your indulgence for a single additional consideration - our policy - We should fix our aim and see what it involves. We should fix our policy and wait or push along that line. To wait is to write history, a history of failure and of folly, a history fatal as it seems to me to the success of future

As they will go elsewhere. Even now students are halting, drawn hither but unwilling to enter upon the work of advanced classes unless they are to have the instruction and influence of several professors. Right as wrong the students judgement decides the case.

A college must have multiplicity in its faculty. But they are right.

This demand is based on five conditions of human nature.

No one man is so symmetrically in character and in culture as to induce in those under his influence a well rounded manhood, unbiased judgement, liberal sympathy, many sided activity, many is an improvement on one though none of the many be the equal in all respects of the one. Facilities, too all requisite to any permanent growth notably facilities for cheap living, other things being equal the student goes where he goes at least expenses, and we may not dispute his right and wisdom in so doing. One idle basement if not out idle attire also should be obliged, its crowd the class room when we build our college. I beg your indulgence for a single additional consideration-authoring-We should fix our aim and see what it involves. We should fix our policy and wait as push along time. To wait is to write history. A history of failure and of folly, a history fated as it seems to me to do the success of future.
