TRANS CULTURAL ALLEGORIES

Mel Yosso's trans-cultural allegories signal a major breakthrough for Western Culture. Timeless myths, they are the assimilated essence of the world's major traditions written in a crystallised Thoreau-like style. Many see them as a major outreach of American society to the emerging World Culture. Each allegory is like a word in a new universal language and can be combined with any or all of the others to make myriad mythical sentences. Thousands of different theatrical productions can be developed from them.

Renowned religious leaders see in them joyous affirmations of faith and endless consciousness expanding possibilities. They will be performed in churches and synagogues worldwide.

Prominent psychiatrists are using them in a new technique "Allegory Therapy", which promises to help thousands of patients. Many hospitals and clinics are also adopting the technique.

Educationalists see them as a major new teaching device from Grade School through University levels. Students can script their own mythical worldviews.

The United Nations Church Center is having an INTERNATIONAL ALLEGORICAL CONFERENCE in June of 1978 to study the Religious, Educational, Psychiatric, Artistic and Performance aspects of the form.

These allegories are a unique occurrence in literary history. They restate the affirmative visions of Thoreau, Emerson, Whitman and others of their calibre, combined with the wisdom of older civilizations, written in a synthesized form accessible to everyone. A significant contribution to world culture, they celebrate Man's connection to the best that has been, and are helping to accelerate the breakthrough in consciousness which is our passport to the waiting World and Universal Consciousness!

For information on the conference, please phone or write Mel Yosso, Village Box 104, New York, N.Y. 10014, (212)799-9190.

TRANS CULTURAL ALLEGORY EXAMPLE

Man and Woman sit by fireplace.

Man: It's not very bright just now.

Woman: What do you expect?

Man: More flames!

Woman: It's been burning for ages. You expect too much.

Man: I do not!

Woman: (Sadly) You do.

Man: (Apprehensively) It's getting dimmer.

Woman: Yes, it is.

Man: What should we do?

Woman: Keep it going.

Man: You think we can?

Woman: Possibly.

Man: We have to.

Woman: But can we? That's the question.

Man: We've done it so far.

Woman: (Points to the fire). We've had lots of help.

Man: (Dismayed). You don't think we can expect more?

Woman: I wish I knew. All we can do is wait.

Man: (Lights candle from fire). We can keep it alive until then.

Woman: Until when?

Man: (Raises candle). Whenever.....

Woman: (Lights another candle from his.) Till then.....

(They embrace. Both fondly nurture the candle flames.)
