GREETINGS

We extend hearty greetings to the students, the faculty, the football team, and the worthy coach of our sister school on our campus tonight for the joint Homecoming game.

Our rivalry, perennially keen, has always aroused each team to its best and has made this Baker-Ottawa game the great game of the year. But best of all our contests have demonstrated again and again that good sportsmanship and genuine fellowship can characterize both victor and vanquished, which is as it should be.

We promise you a good fight and a determined one. We shall do our best to wring victory from you but whatever the outcome, here's our hand to every Bakerite. May the best team win.

Welcome home, every Ottawa alumnus and former student! We rejoice to have you back on the campus. Many things have changed for some of you but we can and do welcome you to the old spirit of friendly contest, of warm fellowship, of genuine love, and abiding loyalty.

Let us all forget the weight of cares and flight of years and once again renew our youth as we heartily join in the fellowship and enthusiasm of this Homecoming season.

Welcome Home!!
FOR all those young people who hope to go to college at any time, this little booklet is written. There will be two or three other issues before school closes, and each will have at least one article which may be helpful to you in your selection of a school.

Of course, you will also be interested in knowing something about the activities of Ottawa University. We hope, therefore, that these Pow-Wows will help to keep you informed as to the life and activities of our school.

What the Leaders Say

Owen D. Young Speaks

NOT long ago Owen D. Young, head of the General Electric Company, was called on to deliver a commencement address at his alma mater, St. Lawrence University. This he did and five questions were the basis of his talk. They were so straight to the heart of what one should get out of college that we quote them here:

“Have you,” he asked, “enlarged your knowledge of obligations and increased your capacity to perform them?

“Have you discovered your mental aptitudes?

“Have you learned enough about society and its history to enable you to apply your gifts effectively?

“Have you acquired adequate skill in communication with others?

“Have you developed your intuition and made more sensitive your emotions?”

Mr. Young, speaking of the type of managers he desires to have in his own organization said:

“I say with conviction and confidence that the cultural college still has the advantage over other fields of preparation in training men for high positions in management.

“The problem of the modern manager is to hold a just balance so that capital may be safe and have an adequate return, so that labor may be continuously employed at the highest rate with its own interest, and so that the consumer may get his goods of the highest quality and at the lowest price consistent with sound producing industry. This is the job of the modern manager. Such a manager, in my judgment, needs to be college trained.

“Personally, I prefer industrial managers to be trained in purely cultural colleges rather than in technical schools, because a broad and balanced cultural education is the best qualification I know of for broad and balanced judgment.”

This was a splendid season for the Ottawa University football team. The Braves won 7 out of 8 games, losing only to Haskell in a close game. In the Kansas conference they were not defeated and scored 62 points; the other conference teams of Baker, Kansas Wesleyan, McPherson, and Bethany scored only 7 points.

The passing attack of the Ottawans was heralded far and near as being dangerous to the enemy goal. Several times it clicked to produce touchdowns. In the C. of E. game, when there was only one minute and ten seconds of time left to go, with the score 0 to 0, Jack Knapper shot a long pass to Art Mattis, who pulled it out of the air while closely guarded by an opposing back and stepped over the goal line for the winning touchdown.

And to top the season off Ottawa placed five men on the All-Conference first team: (at the right, top to bottom) Jack Knapper, Bill Gray, Bill Wilkins, Art Mattis, and Lester Daugharthy. On the second team four men placed: Kenneth Senter, Erwin Elder, Clear Watters, and Gerald Stannard.
THAT big elm tree over there,” remarked an old grad, “I remember quite well. Under it I first met old Morris. It wasn’t quite so big then; neither were the rest of these trees.”

He paused and his gaze wandered pleasantly around the broad campus as he admired the many big trees and the shrubbery growing here and there.

“Funny, how things change. The buildings somehow are different. Of course, the science hall and the gym were not built when I was here.” From one great stone building to another he looked. “And the walks and the driveways are changed, too. But that winding walk down toward the northeast gate looks much the same.”

—In a Most Fascinating Setting

Now up that same walk came a pair of college students—young, vibrant, and happy. The old grad watched them as they joined a group at the north door of the Ad building.

“I wish I were back here on this campus and in school once more. The campus was beautiful, but I think it is more attractive now.”

He strolled around until the lights began twinkling on in the buildings; then he left the deepening shadows and muttered something about a campus of beauty is a joy forever.

Reflections
A Glimpse Into the Life of O. U. Braves

According to a university ruling seniors have the right to paint the dome of Taup Jones Hall and adorn it with class numerals. The present seniors used this privilege early this fall and, as you see in the picture, they did a nice job of it. The whole school was aroused one morning sometime later when it was discovered that the dome had been daubed up the night before by underclassmen. Excitement was quelled when the seniors repainted their class numerals.

- With additional room in the university library, it has become one of the most popular places on the campus. Just after the library had been remodeled, fire broke out from an unknown origin and destroyed a desk, tables, and several books. The damage, however, was quickly repaired and soon the rooms looked brighter than before.

- After the football season business men of the town gave members of the squad a big banquet at the Ottawa Country Club. The main speaker at this celebration was Leslie Edmonds, prominent bank president and sports official. He is an alumnus of Ottawa University.
- Debate is of much interest these days. Besides participating in several practice debates, the squad has taken part in one tournament and expects to enter others before the season is closed.

What Our H.S. Friends Are Doing

Olathe High School was recently host to representatives from forty high school Girl Reserve groups in eastern Kansas. All those present enjoyed the many fine conferences and the hospitality of the Olathe G. R.

The year book of the Winfield High School has been cut to $1 this year. The staff is working to secure at least 250 subscriptions before the book will be published.

“The Revolt” is a play that students of the Halstead High School recently enacted.

Handel’s “Messiah” oratorio was presented December 20 by the music department of the Arkansas City High School.

Central High in Kansas City, Missouri, publishes a magazine called “The Sampler” in which the literary work of the students is printed.

Students in the Oberlin schools are mourning the recent death of their much loved superintendent, Caleb W. Smick.

The Garnett High School is elated over having had a successful football team. The squad lost only one game in a difficult schedule.

Twelve high schools sent representatives to the district play day which was sponsored recently by the Women’s Athletic Association of Ottawa University. Schools present were: Bronson, Fort Scott, Garnett, Greeley, Melvern, Osawatomie, Ottawa, Pomona, Rantoul, Richmond, Wellsville, and Williamsburg.

Last year the Leavenworth, Kansas, and Savannah, Missouri, high school buildings both burned at about the same time. Savannah has recently dedicated a new building and Leavenworth is soon to finish its fine new structure.

The senior class of Wyandotte high school recently presented “The Goose Hangs High.” 3,500 attended the three performances which were given.

The high schools of Lawrence, Topeka, Manhattan, Emporia, and Ottawa have formed a new league which has not yet been named. The schools will compete in all athletics and in music.

The Peptomists of the Hutchinson High School have new uniforms. The cap is made up with the school colors and has PEP across the front. The sweater is all blue except the “Turtle neck” which is gold.

According to E. A. Thomas, secretary of the State High School Athletic Association high schools in Kansas will not generally observe the new “Ten second” ruling. The rule requires the team with the ball to take it into their half of the court within ten seconds after obtaining it. Since many high school courts are not very large, officials believe that the rule would not be helpful to the game.

Here is an opportunity for you to get your school mentioned in this little publication. Sit down and write a letter to “Pow-Wow” telling about the most interesting thing that has happened. We will gladly use it along with your name in the next issue.

Oh, yes, if possible, send along a snapshot. We will use that, too.
